Dear Mr. Adams,

Please do not let rich, entitled, spoiled outsiders come here, assume that laws, codes and rules don't apply to them and ruin the beauty that we have created over decades. Stan and Rebecca Roberts seem to believe that they are above the rules that apply to others. Cannon Beach is unique and beautiful precisely because it has rules/laws to protect it. The hideous building would break codes and would destroy the essence of Cannon Beach. It would also begin the degradation of the historic feeling and the beauty, the ocean views of a very special town. This isn't a city, it's a sweet little village, nestled in the forest and set against the sea.

A National Registry property would be impacted. The forest would be diminished.

Building the structure they want would require traffic changes because of the driveway, and traffic safety would be impacted.

One exception to the rules would lead to another and there would be no more Cannon Beach as we have created it over time. If you want to see an example of such ugliness and loss of ocean view, check out the monstrosity at Rockaway Beach, which by no means was ever as lovely as Cannon Beach, but the new building is huge and imposing and utterly blocks the view. It changes Rockaway Beach for the worse, shutting the people away from the ocean.

Sincerely,

Michelle Clark
