Dunes are incredibly important. They are the first defense against rising sea level and storms. Many of Oregon’s dunes were traditionally very mobile, moving back and forth with time but the introduction of AmericN dunegrass stabilized them so that houses could be built.

If you bulldoze them you are again leaving those areas open to erosion, damage by water and wind.

Sincerely,

Hope Stanton

Sent from my iPad